Dear Sirs:

The Bulletin of Atomic Scientists would be most interested in seeing the recently published report of U.S. economists which deals with a comparison of U.S. and Soviet capital investment growth over the period ending in 1959.

The study is mentioned in the New York Times (April 15) but the economists conducting the study are not identified.

The study shows that Soviet heavy industry capital investment is catching up with that in the U.S. and investment in other consumer services is lagging.

The Bulletin is a nonprofit educational magazine, so it may be that there is no charge for your material; if there should be, would you please bill us? Thank you for your cooperation; I am sorry not to be able to specify more exactly the title and authors of the study.

Sincerely,

Paula Fozzy
